

Volunteers wanted to give Sneinton Library a garden makeover

Nottingham charity, the Partnership Council, and Sneinton Library are looking for volunteers to help the Sneinton Library Garden Club give the library's garden a makeover for summer - at a community gardening day on Friday 17th July from 2pm until 4pm.

The library is keen to improve its garden for the benefit of its users. The Partnership Council's Sprout project, an environmental project aimed at 16-25 year olds, has already helped to transform the gardens at Hyson Green Library on Gregory Boulevard, and Bulwell Library on Highbury Road, so is keen to help Sneinton Library to do the same.

The garden at Hyson Green Library was given a makeover with the help of Sprout volunteers and local residents, together with volunteers from UPS (United Parcel Service).

Jabran Ahmad from Sprout explains:

"Sprout has organised community gardening days around the city and they're always very well supported both by our young Sprout volunteers and also by local people.

We're hoping Sneinton residents will join us to help improve the Sneinton Library garden."

Jabran continues:

"Community gardening is a great way to volunteer, especially if you enjoy gardening or being outdoors. Volunteers will be able to enjoy the sunshine, meet new people and learn new skills whilst helping to do something really useful for their neighbourhood."

Minerva Lovin, from the Social Inclusion Team (Sneinton Library) says:

"We're very pleased that the Partnership Council's Sprout project is helping the Sneinton Library Garden Club, it's going to be very exciting to see the results. We have a small garden club with very dedicated and hard working members, but it would be good if we can attract some more members."

The community gardening day at Sneinton Library will involve clearing, weeding, cutting down trees and planting new flowers.
